Folk Artist, James Tolchin Performs at Friends School

Folk musician Jonah Tolchin will be performing at the Princeton Friends School auditorium on Saturday, June 16 at 8 p.m. to celebrate the release of his new album Criminal Man.

Tolchin grew up in Princeton, and at the age of fourteen became a passionate blues guitarist. At age fifteen he appeared at the Tupelo Music Hall in New Hampshire with blues legend Ronnie Earl. Tolchin plays everything from roots to acoustic blues and Americana music.

Tolchin, the son of Susan Danoff and Neal Tolchin of Princeton, has performed extensively throughout New England as a solo artist. This summer he will be recorded for the popular music internet site Daytrotter, and will be a featured performer at several folk festivals in Rhode Island, along with Folk Galore in Jackson, Michigan.

James Tolchin

The album, Criminal Man combines the sounds of folk, blues, bluegrass, and American music in ten original songs (and one cover by Blaze Foley) dedicated to social change. Tolchin is joined on the album by Joe Fletcher, The Low Anthem, Brown Bird, and others.

Admission is $10 for adults and $5 for children twelve and under. The Princeton Friends School is located at 470 Quaker Road in Princeton.

STUART CONGRATULATES OUR WINNERS IN THE 2012 NATIONAL STEM VIDEO GAME CHALLENGE!

Grade 8 Stuart Girls Julia Weingaertner, Madeleine Lapuerta, Emma Froehlich, Sarah Lippman, and Chloe Mario won for designing and programming original math video games.

"They were the only girls amid the 28 winning students from throughout the country — showing that the girl power of the Stuart School is a force to be reckoned with."

- Princeton Packet, May 25, 2012

"These games [by Stuart Girls] are better than 90 percent of the educational games in the app store ... that the winners of this particular challenge were all girls makes me feel like we're headed in the right direction for getting more girls involved in future STEM careers."
